Hi, folks. I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on October the 30th, 2012.

For newcomers, help yourself to my website, cuttingthroughthematrix.com.

You'll see a bunch of other sites listed there; these are the official ones. They all carry audios for free download. And they all carry transcripts in English, for print up (of the talks I've given). And you can also go into alanwattsentientsentinel.eu for transcripts in other languages. Remember too, you're the audience that bring me to you. I don't plug anything. I don't give you incredible mysteries and 'all you need is love' or anything else or sell you things to make you live forever. I just tell you the hard facts of life, because after all, anything that happens in life, you have to do yourself; there's nothing for free. There's nothing else out there going to come in and help you. That's the message of even all the ancient religions. You've got to help yourself to a better life here. Most folk are unwilling and so they leave it to something else to do it for them and that's why it just gets worse and worse. It doesn't happen. So, all I do is sell the books and discs at cuttingthroughthematrix.com. And from the US to Canada, remember, if you want to buy them, you can still send a personal check or you can use an international postal money order from the post office. You can send cash from the US to Canada and you can also use PayPal. Across the world Western Union, Money Gram and PayPal and straight donations are awfully welcome.

And it's very, very true: most folk really are not rational, you know. And I'm not the first guy to say it, by any means. In fact, the guys who understand that you're not rational have written lots and lots of books over the years, about how they'd use that irrationality against yourselves, and turn it upon you, in fact, and they would guide you through irrationality into what you think is a new freedom, a new freedom that was designed to make you utterly dependent on the brand new system they're bringing in, called the Great Transition (many other names they have for it, too). And you're living through the big transitions of chaos and you all think it's quite normal because everyone else is doing the same as yourself, mainly because they all watch the same TV shows that you watch too. It's quite fascinating that 50, 60, even 100 years ago, the big boys talked about this. The early behaviorists (the guys that were working with Bernays and others, long before even Bernays came along and Freud), they knew how to manipulate whole populations because they'd been at it for thousands of years. These are old techniques and old sciences. Today it's far better because they've got the instant pulse of the populace; they know what you're chatting about, tweeting about, thinking about in all your emails and on your phone conversations and so it's far easier for them to tweak us here and tweak us there to get us into the right meme, at the right time. And so that we're all trending along the same path of destruction. And it's quite fascinating, the pied piper idea. That's what it's all about: the pied piper idea. And you don't want to be left behind. You've got to be the same as everyone else. That's the unfortunate thing about it. You understand, individuality (the concept of individuality) only came out in about the 1700's. Before that, everybody was either a somebody (that was nobility and royalty) and then you had a middle class of merchants and merchant bankers, a few free men and then the rest were serfs or peasants, so everyone was lumped in as a mass, of their own little clique and sometimes a big clique like the peasants. And then again too, ever since the Enlightenment, they went right back to trying to force you all back into the mass man. That's all that Marx talked about: the masses, the masses, the masses, and then there were people like himself, who were awfully special, above the masses. And individuality has been crammed out of us again and we're all into a new world socialist system to manage all of us, called "interdependence." Interdependence, meaning, to live, you as a person, an individual, you have to be completely dependent on the whole system and structure to survive. There's no independence whatsoever. In fact, the United Nations has declared individuality as an outlaw, the greatest danger to survival of, you know, the rest of them (for the 'greater good'). Back with more after this break.

Hi, folks. We're Cutting Through the Matrix, talking about this incredible system we're living in. And it really is incredible when you realize that people plan every part of it. All the big things that happen are planned years in advance, often. The biggest part of it is conditioning you with ideas that you've never had before, so that when things happen you think it's all quite natural. And especially it's the way that it's presented to you that seems to be natural, like great catastrophes and things like that. If you look at even all the disaster movies we've had, and The Day After Tomorrow and things like that and big waves sweeping through New York, most folk don't consciously remember it but it's in their subconscious and then the big boys play up a big storm, trying to create a massive storm to get us all under the new spell of homeland security, so we're guided through our lives by them, from now on until eternity, just like domestic terrorism for eternity, as well. And it didn't work out the way that they wanted but they still hype it up. Because every 10 years or so, the US always on the Eastern Seaboard gets whacked with big waves and a good storm. And the east side of New York always gets flooded because it's lower and the drains are always plugged. They're inadequate to start with and the subways get full of water too. But to listen to the media, ever since they created the Weather Channel, if you get half an inch of rain or a few millimeters, as they say in Canada, then you think it's going to be a massive storm. Everything that they say is a massive storm and you watch a trickle of rain, generally. And that's it over and done with.

What I'm saying is, you've been taught to be afraid, very, very afraid, as the old horror stories went, and folk are. They panic all the time with these things coming in. So we're conditioned years in advance, mainly through fiction and it imprints in your mind. Because in horror-type fiction, you can't look away even in a rotten one, because you might lose your life. That's how it works. Part of your brain, the very primitive part, will look at the most terrible horror movie and you won't look away because you get involved in it, regardless. And something that happens might save your life or lose it so you keep watching it and that sticks in your head. And then you're ready for the big boys to come out, telling you that, "oh you're causing global warming. This is all to do with global warming. We've got to change our whole way of living; so all you that caused it will have to suffer and pay lots of cash," to the big boys that invented it, you see. It's quite simple: we live through conology and conology runs the world. But what I'm saying is, people really are not truly thinking through it with logic, at all. And big writers have gone through the whole scenario of what does motivate us, of course. And sex is a very simple one. That's why there's so much sex out there. Sex, sex, sex. It wouldn't matter if the world truly was falling apart, they'd give you lots and lots of sex. It always works. Because, again, it's a primal indicator, a primal drive.

Now, as we go through the big changes and Ban Ki-moon, by the way, was on, getting his Peace award, again. They give it to each other every so often, you know, when they're bored I guess, Peace Prizes to themselves. And he was on about the Great Transition coming and how equality was going to happen across the world, mainly through women and children. He didn't mention... they never mention men, at all. They're kind of out of the picture, but he was prattling on about the Great Transition, the great changes, as they bring in their world-wide socialist system of experts to run every facet of your life, basically, to bring in equality, you understand. And if you want to know too why you're seeing so much about pedophilia right now, you understand, these pedophiles have to get their equal rights. That's a big move, big move. And you will find you're going to get more and more stories about pedophilia and we'll all say, "tut-tut, that's so sad and so bad, isn't it," and that'll be the end of it, because the big boys want to have debates about this so as they can get their full rights; after all, it's their preference, grabbing children, isn't it?

And they also tell you that this amalgamation of countries, as they plunder countries (I'm talking about the bankers and so on - that own the United Nations, they own NATO, they own the whole structured system in which we live and everything that we need to live on now, by the way, too), that they're telling us that it's great, this multi-cultural thing and everything is just great and yada yada ya, as every country that takes masses of immigration goes down the tubes with the welfare state. Now, here's an example (one of many examples - you can pick them out everyday until, again, we don't want to read them, we're so used to them, really), but it says,

"A Nigerian people smuggler who used witchcraft rituals to force children to work as sex slaves was jailed for 20 years yesterday. Osezua Osolase, 42, tricked poverty-stricken Nigerian orphans into travelling to the UK with the promise of a better life."

Alan: Now, how did he get orphans into the UK to start with? You see? It says,

"But the young victims were raped, sexually abused and subjected to voodoo-style rituals by a child trafficking ring."

Alan: So, he brings them in because there's already an established child trafficking ring, in this great civilization as we go up and higher on the civilization plank, there's more and more pedophilia going on, just like Savile, of course; that'll get dropped too, by the way, because if they go past Savile and above him, they'd have to probably arrest three-quarters of the House of Lords and all the royalty up there and all their hundreds of relatives too. It says,

"Osolase, the linchpin of a multi-million pound global sex trafficking ring, used 'juju' magic to control his victims."

"He told the teenage girls they would die or never bear children if they tried to escape or revealed what had happened to them."

Alan: And,

"Judge Adele Williams told Osolase: 'You are arrogant and manipulative, you are devoid of conscience, devoid of any compassion to your victims.'"

Alan: And he says,

"'You were dealing in exploitation and misery and degradation. You have been convicted on clear and compelling evidence of trafficking two girls in and out of the UK.' Once they arrived in the UK the reality was explained to them that they were going to have to work as prostitutes. 'They were petrified that if they spoke out they would be harmed and killed.'"

Alan: And it says,

"During the trial it emerged that Osolase raped one of the young girls [himself] knowing he had HIV. Judge Williams described this as a 'seriously aggravating' feature to his crimes. At Canterbury Crown Court on Friday, Osolase was convicted of five counts of trafficking for sexual exploitation, one of rape and one of sexual activity with a child."

"The charges relate to three girls aged 14, 16, and 17. One was raped and all three endured juju rituals, including one conducted by Osolase himself."

Alan: You see... you understand, the European Union and this globalization is bringing "civilization" to us all. I mean, you understand that, you know? It says,

"One feared she was being taken to another country to be used as a human sacrifice. Osolase slashed the chest of his youngest victim with a razor and rubbed black powder into her bleeding wounds. On the surface, Osolase was a recycling worker living in a terraced house in Gravesend, Kent [in England]. But his home was a secret staging post for vulnerable teenage orphans as they were smuggled from Africa, via Britain, to several European countries. Detectives discovered evidence that at least 28 victims were smuggled in and out of Britain over a 14-month period, earning him up to £1.5million."

Alan: So, it seems for the big boys that crime pays, it would seem, you know, but you understand, there's no shock, as I say, about any of this, in this day and age. Same with Savile, too. Folk have watched so much pornography on regular television, that they're so jaded, that it's a yawn. Because children aren't safe anymore, in fact none of us are - nobody's safe anymore, in this system. And it was all done by design, to destroy all cultures, you understand. So that there'd be no cultures; you would have no cultures to fight this new world order idea, this globalization idea, this master-servant relationship idea or what they call equality. And then when you read trash like this too and this is the stuff that folk with televisions are lapping up. Because, as I say, you just mention sex and they got to tune in, you know. It says,

"What TV's new Sex And The City reveals about the lives of young women today... and it's both shocking and heartbreaking"

Alan: It's shocking? Who gets shocked today, for goodness sake? And then it goes through this story and the whole bit about the one who writes it and how there's so much pornography, that they have to pick up boyfriends that have watched nothing but pornography and do all these things that they've seen in pornography etc etc. How sad it is to be liberated, isn't it? I mean, are they never happy? I mean, you know, what is it? What's wrong in today's society? Hmm? But I'll put this trash up tonight, to show you what the media throws at you as it keeps you utterly occupied, so that you don't read the PDFs coming from the United Nations with all the big international corporations that are making deals with governments and deals with the United Nations, to rule all of our lives. That's why they give you this stuff here. You understand, society as we know it, is over and finished. It's finished, folks. It's so broken and finished that it can't get back together. It couldn't happen. And that's just a fact. But I'll put this trash up tonight, for you to look at, for anyone who's interested.

And this is from UN Secretary-General, Ban Ki-moon and it says,

"The human family..."

Alan: Did you know you're part of a human family? You know. It's like the "family of nations." We're all families apparently.

"... is at a critical juncture and the world is moving through a Great Transition..."

Alan: That's what they call it; I've mentioned this for a long time, The Great Transition, and put up PDFs – I don't think anybody's bothered to read them. But it says,

"... Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said in an address on receiving the 'Seoul Peace Prize' on Monday."

Alan: That's what they do on boring days at the United Nations. They give each other prizes.

"In his remarks titled 'The Pursuit of Peace at a Time of Global Transition,'..."

Alan: This is when we're blowing countries up across the whole planet.

"... the Secretary-General pointed out that 'this transition is economic, as the digital revolution advances and as new powers and groups emerge.' 'Today's engines of growth are largely in the developing world. Korea itself hosted the G20 Summit two years ago — the first to be held outside North America and Europe. The implications of this momentous shift — from West to East, and from North to the global South — are only beginning to unfold. The Great Transition is also developmental, as we seek a more sustainable path. The social perils of rising inequality and joblessness are clear. And our ecological footprint is overstepping the earth's boundaries. We are using resources as if we had two planets, not one. There can be no Plan B because there is no planet B.'"

Alan: He says. So, that was obviously written by his marketer. "There can be no Plan B because there is no planet B." Oh, very clever, eh? Clever. Not bad, getting all that cash, to put that in there. But, you understand, they're bringing in this big world society, where they have many changes to make yet, right down to cloning servants after we're all finished and, technically, we are. Back with more, after this.

Hi, folks. I'm Alan Watt. We're Cutting Through the Matrix. And it's just astonishing, the things that are done at the high levels, that affect all of us. That's how everything works, actually, isn't it? And we simply have it filtered down to us until it sort of soaks into us through osmosis without thinking much about it. But, the big boys, of course, who play God (they actually believe they're gods and they really do, you know - it's a very old religion), but they actually believe that they're gods and they've got the right to re-modify the whole planet, to perfect all that that was left imperfect, apparently. And that includes all of the species of wildlife and trees and forest and us, as well. Interestingly enough, I had another article last week, I didn't read it but it was about Monsanto; they've got forests of GM trees they've got up in different places in the States and elsewhere. Because they know they're going to kill everything else off with their spraying, you see, and they're involved in that too (the big chemical companies), the aerial spraying. Anyway, this article here goes into modified mosquitoes. I mean are we asked about it? in fact do you even hear about it? Of course you don't hear about it. And if you do, it's lost amongst all the incredible amounts of data, useless data they throw at you every day. But remember, Canada, for one country, for instance, we led the field in modifying mosquitoes for warfare purposes, since World War II. And Canada also supplied the big bases in the US with these modified mosquitoes. They're big ones, big suckers. And they can get loaded up with a loading dose, an infecting dose of bacterium or viruses. You need a certain amount to really take off in the body, so the bigger the mosquito the better. And then you find that Canada's got lots of these organizations and companies, making all kinds of mysterious bugs. Of course it's always for the good, isn't it? Everything's for the 'greater good.' Whatever they sell to you, any idea they sell to you, is for the 'greater good,' and how it's going to benefit the world. But this is about genetically-modified mosquitoes. It says here,

"A public consultation is now being held online..."

Alan: You ever heard about this one?

"... on a draft guidance framework to provide quality standards for assessing the safety and efficacy of genetically modified (GM) mosquitoes for malaria and dengue control. So far, trials of GM mosquitoes have been conducted in enclosed spaces, such as large cages, or under controlled field conditions. Once published, the guidance document is intended to help those planning and conducting all phases of testing."

Alan: And they've already tested different stuff over in Africa and different places, under the Gates project. That's all part of it too. It says,

"The main method currently under discussion seeks to suppress the number of wild mosquitoes by changing the males genetically..."

Alan: Isn't that racist and sexist, eh?

"... so that their offspring do not survive to adulthood after release in the field. Another method, which is still under development, is to genetically change mosquitoes so that they no longer transmit malaria parasites and dengue pathogens. In this second case, 'The idea would be for the GM mosquitoes to replace the wild population,' said Dr Yeya Touré, team leader of the Vectors, Environment and Society unit at TDR. 'It is important to have mechanisms in place to ensure that the GM mosquitoes are safe for human health and the environment.'"

Alan: After you've read all the rest of the lecture that Ban Ki-moon made about, you know, population, there's too many of, you know, you lot and all that kind of stuff, you begin to wonder if they want to bring us down with this method, as well. We're not getting killed fast enough; and that's what they said at the big Lucky Gene Club, remember? Rockefeller says that we have to go from a negative form of birth control (that's abortions and so on) and step up into rapid depopulation... rapid depopulation. So, the spraying above our heads isn't killing us all fast enough either, or the birds or everything else that it's killing off. So, they want to step it up and they're changing all the bugs around you, as well. So, it says here,

"The guidance framework development process has been led by two organizations: TDR, the Special Programme for Research and Training in Tropical Diseases, which is based at the World Health Organization and co-sponsored by UNICEF, UNDP..."

Alan: Another United Nations one.

"... the World Bank and WHO..."

Alan: Now, these are all organizations set up by the Royal Institute for International Affairs that came up with the idea of the United Nations as a front group, so that their big corporations would get all their, you know, fascist control of the whole planet. But it's a great front group; it always talks left-wing all the time and that satisfies most folk. It says,

"... and by the Foundation for the National Institutes of Health in the United States."

Alan: You understand, we didn't vote for any of these organizations and we never will get a chance to vote for them either. It says,

"Its drafting and review were undertaken through a collaboration with more than 40 experts worldwide who either contributed to working groups or served as external reviewers. It has gone through a series of reviews by health experts in developing and developed countries, as well as experts from other fields including molecular biology, ecology, regulatory requirements, and ethical, social and cultural issues."

Alan: Now, the ethical part, like bioethics, is eugenics, folks, for those who haven't caught on to it yet. So, that's who's really behind it. It says,

"This is its first public consultation."

Alan: Did you get anything through your mail or anywhere on this? to see what you thought about it? Because they're wanting to dump this stuff on you, you know, wherever you happen to live.

"TDR has been working for several years to develop a pool of scientists well trained in the assessment and management of biosafety for human health and the environment in relation to the potential use of genetically modified (GM) mosquitoes for the control of vector-borne diseases."

Courses in biosafety have been held in regional training centres in Africa, Asia and Latin America for 148 participants from 51 countries over three years..."

Alan: And that's all they give you on that because they don't want to tell you too much; however, I have the PDF here, from the World Health Organization, which tells you right off the bat. It says,

"- Do not cite or quote"

Alan: That's what it says. Do you believe the gall of that? "Do not cite or quote."

"Testing of Genetically Modified Mosquitoes"

Alan: So, I'm putting it up anyway. And I might not cite it or quote it but I can guess at what it might say. Eh? Back with more after this.

{Break ♪- You're listening to the Republic Broadcasting Network, because you can handle the truth!}

Hi, folks. I'm back. We're Cutting Through the Matrix. Talking about altering mosquitoes and then tossing them over people's heads in different areas across the whole planet including, obviously, America as well and Canada. And this PDF, I'll put up tonight, is not to be quoted, remember, or cited. I'll put that up as well for those who want to know what's going on. But they've got all these bioethicists involved and obviously good specialists in marketing and so on, to con local communities to go along with things. That's what they call "good business practices." And you've got to know what's really happening and this is a nasty, nasty one indeed. And really, we'll be the last ones to be told the exact absolute truth of what it's really for, I guarantee you that... guarantee you that. At this level of reality, whatever is dished out to you, is a con. There's always a real reason; you know, there's always a good reason, then there's a real reason for it. That's how things are done. But I'll put this one up tonight too for those who care two hoots about it. And {laughs} it's quite something though.

"All Three Branches Agree:..."

Alan: It says,

"Big Brother is the New Normal"

Alan: And it says,

"Despite Hurricane Sandy,..."

Alan: That kind of fizzled out and they're really upset about it at the top. They put a lot of money and spraying and HAARPing onto that thing, to build it up. So much so, you could taste the stuff in your mouth, even up here in Canada, the metal particles that came in; eyes were burning, noses were dripping, even before the winds hit you and this is all from the spray that they helped spray on it. Anyway, it says,

"... the Supreme Court on Monday entertained oral arguments on whether it should halt a legal challenge to a once-secret warrantless surveillance program targeting Americans' communications, a program that Congress eventually legalized in 2008. The hearing marked the first time the Supreme Court has reviewed any case touching on the eavesdropping program that was secretly employed by the President George W. Bush administration in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attacks, and largely codified into law years later. Just three weeks ago that the Supreme Court closed a six-year-old chapter in the Electronic Frontier Foundation's bid to hold the nation's telecoms liable for allegedly providing the National Security Agency with backdoors to eavesdrop, without warrants, on Americans' electronic communications in violation of federal law. The justices, without comment, declined to review a lower court's December decision dismissing the EFF's lawsuit. At the center of the dispute was legislation retroactively immunizing the telcos from being sued for cooperating with the government in Bush's warrantless spy program. Fast forward to Monday, and the court took the historic step of hearing a post-September 11 spying case. Judging by the high court's deference to Congress in general and how it killed the EFF spy case weeks ago, we likely already know the outcome of this highly complex issue now before the justices: Warrantless spying is expected to continue unabated for years, and possibly forever."

Alan: I would put, "definitely forever," because that's always been the intention of it. You can't have a totalitarian society and world government without it. It says,

"University of Baltimore legal scholar Garrett Epps in a Sunday blog post in the Atlantic asked in a headline whether 'Big Brother is the New Normal?' His own affirmative answer is spot-on:..."

Alan: And he says,

"...'Whatever the court decides, Big Brother will still be watching. Big Brother may be watching you right now, and you may never know,' he said. 'Since 9/11, our national life has changed forever. Surveillance is the new normal.' Let's start with summarizing the legal issue before that Supreme Court. The same law that immunized the telcos is before the justices. This time, however, another section of the FISA Amendments Act..."

Alan: And this is a PDF you can download here too. I'll put it up tonight, all these links up at cuttingthroughthematrix.com.

"...is at issue. The act, subject to a challenge by the American Civil Liberties Union and others, authorizes the government to electronically eavesdrop on Americans' phone calls and e-mails without a probable-cause warrant so long as one of the parties to the communication is believed to be outside the United States. Communications may be intercepted 'to acquire foreign intelligence information.'"

Alan: And a high court judge, recently, also, issued one ruling. He said that when the big boys in internal security are just snooping around and sniffing (as the judge called it – it's a very technical term, sniffing) – judges are weird folk, too, mind you (they like their noses and their sniffing) – but he did say that if they happen to sniff on something that was passing through the ethernet at that time, then that was quite legal. So, of course they're monitoring at home. Anyway, this goes on and on about FISA requirements and all the rest of it, the F.I.S.A. and so on and so on. So, what you've got really is, this is the new normal: perpetual warfare, terrorism, perpetual eavesdropping for everyone. It's the new normal. Most of you don't have to worry, mind you, because if you're watching TV and behaving and following and actually doing and emulating what you see on TV, you're quite normal. And that means you're safe, you see.

Now, this article too, is to do with Greece, Now Greece... poor Greece... that's been hammered, as an example, by the big central bankers, who now have all the power over a whole continent, basically. And they've got every other country into massive debt, bailing out one after another – more debt than ever, ever before in order to bail out countries and it's not stopped yet. Anyway,

Alan: In Greece,

“...who dared to name tax evaders:...”

Alan: The big ones in Greece who helped bring all this on, mind you, and probably involved in politics too, some of their own bankers. He actually named the names of the tax evaders who had accounts over in Switzerland. And they came in during his radio program and grabbed him and slammed him in prison. It says,

“Kostas Vaxevanis, editor of Hot Docs, was giving a radio interview in Athens when officers stormed into the studio saying he had to go ‘to be arrested’. Today, as he appeared in court, Greek daily Ta Nea reprinted the list across ten of its pages in possible act of defiance. Vaxevanis faces up to two years in prison for what police say was the illegal publication of personal details without proof of any law breaking. He says it is not him being put on trial but ‘freedom of the press.’ The list, given to Greece by France in 2010, contains names of 2,059 Greek account holders at HSBC, Switzerland, to be probed for possible tax evasion.”

Alan: And we'll see what happens there. It says,

“At a time of unprecedented austerity in Greece, his exposure of allegations involving £1.6billion have taken on huge significance.”

Alan: And he says,

“‘If anyone is accountable before the law then it is those ministers...”

Alan: That's the politicians,

“...who hid the list, lost it and said it didn't exist. I only did my job. I am a journalist and I did my job.’ The public prosecutors' office has shown a special interest in its dealings with me. I don't know why this is the case.’ Mr Vaxevanis was arrested on Sunday and faces two years in prison if he is convicted. He is due to appear in the Athens court again on Thursday.”

Alan: Well, you see in this real world that's a no-no. You just don't publish the truth for goodness sake, because we're so, you know, fair and all that today. They're going to put you in the slammer forever. It says,

"He was backed yesterday by the Greek daily newspaper Ta Nea, which also published the list spread over 11 news pages. The 2,059 named Greeks, who have a combined £1.6billion in Swiss accounts, include dozens of prominent business figures and two former ministers."

Alan: That's politicians.

"The list was handed to the Greek government by the French authorities more than two years ago."

Alan: But they lost it, you see.

"It has been nicknamed the 'Lagarde List' after Christine Lagarde, the head of the International Monetary Fund..."

Alan: Who pays no taxes at all, mind you.

"... who was the French finance minister when it was handed over. Greek authorities insist there is no evidence those included have broken the law."

Alan: It says,

"Poesy, a union for Greek journalists, denounced the arrest of Mr Vaxevanis, saying the prosecutor's actions threatened free speech in a country where the press is self regulated."

Alan: So, it goes on and on and on but I mean nothing will come out of it because you're not living in what you think is freedom and even this farce of democracy (not that that would ever work either), but you've never had it and it doesn't exist, unless you belong to one of the authorized NGO groups (non-governmental organizations) that are authorized by the United Nations to be somebodies. You see? Otherwise, you're a nobody. If you just belong to the general quiet masses, you're a nobody and so that's no use, at all. You've got to belong to a special group to have any voice at all in democracy. And also, an update on that too, I'll put this update about this particular journalist, up tonight, as well. And we'll see what transpires there. But there's just no way at all they're going to let go of this one. See, you can't say the truth. Even if it's the same pigs that are bankrupting your country and the whole of Europe through working with the European Central Bank. You understand, the world is run by big mafias, that's all it is, big gangs of mafia. All really belonging to the same world mafia, but it's one big mafia system. That's the reality. There's even... god, in Montreal in Canada, they've had this mafia thing going on for months now about the extortion rackets to do with kickbacks from government contracts in Montreal. Every 10 or 15 years this comes out, because it's always been the normal. It's the same across the States and Britain and everywhere else. You get the government contract awarded to you, it's always twice as much as what it should really cost and you've got to kick back so much to the ones who sent you the contract from the government. This is the real world we live in. It really is the real world. You can do that or go back to watching Disneyland. And fascism is always good for a laugh, you know, and here you have it in Pennsylvania,

"PA law would make workers pay taxes to their bosses"

Alan: I remember when it was coming out, but I think they've actually passed it now. I remember reading it at the time.

"Republican Governor Tom Corbett is deciding whether or not to sign legislation that would require some workers to pay taxes to their bosses."

Alan: It says,

"Yes, you read that right. The bill, which would allow companies that hire at least 250 new workers in the state to keep 95-percent of the workers' withheld income tax, is an effort to recruit Oracle to the state."

Alan: It says. Oracle must be the name of the program.

"Your taxes would get withheld by your boss like normal, but they would then keep them and spend it on private jets or monogrammed bathroom fixtures or whatever instead of turning them over to the state--turning your tax dollars over to the state being the whole reason they were ostensibly 'withheld' in the first place."

Alan: Not that they're supposed to.

"In some sense making workers pay taxes directly to their boss is just cutting out the middleman: lavish corporate welfare in the form of taxpayer subsidies to business is the norm. States fall over each other in a rush to make themselves look the most appealing--meaning low taxes and wages alongside weak labor and environmental protection--and then sweeten the deal with specially-tailored giveaways to lure specific companies..."

Alan: And it says,

"... (see Corbett's $1.6 billion tax credit to Shell oil). A spokesperson for Senate Majority Leader Dominic Pileggi (R-Delaware) told The Inquirer, which ran this very under-covered story on their front page yesterday, that the measure is 'another tool for the state to attract quality jobs.' State Sen. Jim Ferlo (D-Allegheny), however, complained that it amounted to 'waylaying those employees' wages, almost akin to Jesse James robbing a bank, and we're going to put it back in the pockets of one company, in one locale, in one county, in one job site.' The law passed with support from both parties, though with much stronger Republican backing. Perhaps the most shocking hypocrisy is that state Rep. Daryl Metcalfe, a right-wing libertarian who campaigns for 'getting state government off our backs and out of our pockets,' voted for the corporate welfare bill."

Alan: It says,

“Targeted tax incentives are a poor substitute for across-the-board tax reductions that apply to all businesses,” says Commonwealth Foundation’s Jay Ostrich, expressing a more consistent conservative position. ‘When government has picked winners and losers with tax credit programs history has shown poor results for accountability and transparency, including failing to actually verify that actual jobs were created.’ The bill passed the legislature last week without the public ever paying that much attention. At this point, voters can contact Governor Corbett’s office... ”

Alan: And it gives you the number.

“Or maybe Oracle has something to say about whether they think it’s appropriate for their workers to pay them for jobs...”

Alan: And, so there you go. I mean fascism is doing awfully well. You know it was better in the old days when you were a peasant serf. You had less problems, because they didn’t have a massive amount of government bureaucracies and agencies coming to your door, telling you what to do and where to put your septic tank or whatever else it happened to be. And you knew where you stood with your boss who was the big landlord. He was literally the land lord, he was the lord of the land, under a feudal system and you got to keep about forty percent of what you grew on the farm—which you didn’t own, the boss owned it. And that kept to feed you, your families and work helpers and animals and all the rest of it. And the boss took sixty percent. It’s pretty-well the same, today, with taxes. They take most of that off you, too. They call it democracy now, you see. But at least you didn’t have all the massive governmental agencies on your back, as well. You didn’t have that. And you got lots of good holidays too. They had a lot of religious holidays in those days where you’d get good meals and a good booze-up at night and folk had fun, you know. You don’t get much fun these days. If you do, it’s a weaponized fun from television or the Internet.

Now, it says here,

“Retired people should be forced to work for charity or lose pension, peer says”

Alan: This peer says. They have lots of peers in Britain because they’re always in the pub. But it says,

“Pensioners’ groups have hit out at Lord Bichard after he came up with the scheme to stop old people becoming a ‘burden on the State.’”

Alan: You know the same old people that paid this fart’s wages for the last hundred years, you know, and everybody else’s big fat wages and everything else (all the big corporations they’ve got there – they paid all that too).

“Retired people should be forced to do unpaid community work and have their pensions docked if they refuse, a senior peer claims. Lord Bichard, a former head of the Benefits Agency, says younger pensioners could be asked to help care for the very old and frail.”

Alan: Now, you see, these old pensioners paid probably ninety percent of their income on every wage cheque that was dopped off them too, in taxes, to create a better system, so that when they got old and other folk got old and even got sick, they'd be well taken care of, not euthanized. I've got stories on euthanasia, too. Now nurses can come into your home now and euthanize you in Britain, as well, without anybody's permission, by the way. So, you've been conned, conned and conned and now all the money that you paid in your whole life didn't go to where you thought it was going. It went for the big boys' corporate structures and their big international corporate groups across the planet. And a lot of it goes to the United Nations to sterilize a lot of people in the third world countries. The whole world is a con, you understand, I hope you understand that. The whole world is one incredible psychological con. Very well created, by people who have been brought up and taught the art of conology. They're experts in conology and how you think, you see. Anyway, Lord Richard said,

"He claimed the move would stop the old - most of whom paid national insurance for decades to earn their pensions - becoming a 'burden on the State.' Richard raised the issue at a House of Lords committee hearing into the impact of the aging population."

Alan: Like they've never had aging populations until now. It's the first time it's ever happened.

"He said: 'We are now prepared to say to people who are not looking for work, if you don't look for work you don't get benefits. So if you are old and you are not contributing in some way or another, maybe there is some penalty attached to that.' "

Alan: Well, maybe they should take this guy out into a farm field somewhere and get him to pick up some spuds and get him working for a... let him know what work means. Eh? You know what I'm saying? I'm not kidding about this. I'm not kidding about this. That's what you're going to have to do, folks. These folk cannot relate to you, at all. You're just 'the masses down there,' peasants, simpletons; that's how this character Richard sees you. He also said,

"Are we using all the incentives at our disposal to encourage older people, not just to be a negative burden on the State but to actually be a positive part of society?"

Alan: As they bail out other countries' debts, he's telling the folk in Britain this. I think they should just put him on a pole and make him a scarecrow. Then he'd work for a living. Back with more after this.

Hi, folks. I'm back and we'll go to the phones. There's Jeff from Connecticut, hanging on there. Are you still there Jeff?

Jeff: Yes I am, Alan. Can you hear me?

Alan: Yes I can.

Jeff: Alright, well I just heard you saying earlier, how the whole world is a con and I've also heard you say that everything's hidden in plain view, and being here, in Connecticut, we had this storm called Sandy. They're calling it "Super Storm," "Frankenstorm," all these crazy names they can come up with to hype it up. I noticed, I saw an article the other day that in 1997, NOAA ran a drill for a hurricane for the East Coast, called Sandy and it made landfall in the New Jersey, New York area. And it just seems kind of funny to me that it took that same kind of right turn that Katrina took, you know; it has that same kind of hook to it and it almost seems like there might have been HAARP involved here or like... It just seems odd, right before an election, that a hurricane of this kind of material would come in to land like this and they're saying they're shutting down voting in all the states around here now.

Alan: Yeah and plus too, there were so many aircraft involved, right up to the end, before it hit landfall.

Jeff: I saw the spraying here big time.

Alan: Yes, they were building up to it for weeks and then even last night over Ohio, there were still jets going out there and spraying into it, as well, trying to build it up even higher. If you have shortwave radio, you can pick up the frequencies of HAARP and for the last five days solid, it's been just... you hear the HAARP sound. You can't mistake it. It's the loudest sound on the shortwave, in fact, as they really try to pummel this one in, superheat it inside, as well. And they can certainly guide them. That's old stuff that they've come out with that it can actually do. I mean they've signed all these agreements in the 70's, right up to the present, for weather warfare at the United Nations, so they've been able to do this since at least the 70's.

Jeff: It's amazing. I talk to people about it. You know, I talk to them about HAARP and the weather manipulation and all the things that have been declassified since the 60's and everybody just laughs at it. And they think it's hilarious, like there's no way, you know, there's no way they can do that. And they control wars like this. They can control the food. They control the markets of food with the weather and the people that own, you know, fund these programs also own the places that tell you about the weather and hype it up...

Alan: Well, you know Rothschild took over the weather channel, Rothschild. And he's big into world food today, and his own GM food, as well, across India and different places. Now they've got the world's food supply up on the futures market and these guys who are in on the big world spraying agenda that we've got going on, are also the same guys who own the agribusiness of the world and they're putting massive bets on crops failing here because of flood and other ones that'll fail because of drought, because they literally can control the weather, globally, so minutely now. And they're actually doing it; they've been doing it for quite some years now. Yeah. So you're quite right.

Jeff: It's amazing. It's sick. It's sick because we have to watch it happen. I mean, I'm a chef, personally, and, you know, I watch my food prices go up every single day and that affects my business. And I just see how easy it is to manipulate what food comes up and what food costs.

Alan: Absolutely.

Jeff: It affects the economy, big time. I mean, when people can't afford to go to the grocery store, they're definitely not going to be able to afford to come out to eat anymore.

Alan: That's correct. And the other thing is too, as I say, the big boys who are speculating on the food markets and derivatives now (it's up on derivatives, as well), they are causing floods. They know where it's going to be. They know where droughts are going to be because they're a part of the big world establishment. And they know where they're going to be spraying, what kind of spray they're going to be using. And they're making a fortune right now, plus they push the bio-industry, to do with the bio-fuels industry. One third of crops now, is going into their bio-fuels, which further lessens the world's food supply. Great business for those who own all the rest of it, though. Great business, as they jack the prices right up. You're absolutely spot on. Spot on with it. There's nothing decent in this system. It's corrupt and the crooks are all at the top, with very official sounding titles. Thanks for calling.

From Hamish and myself from Ontario, Canada, it's goodnight and may your God or your gods go with you.
